

Cement Concern Winner In Suit for Taylor Death

Supreme Court Reverses
Case From Howard County.

KILLED IN ACCIDENT

Injured When Caught Under Pile of Falling
Cross-ties.

LITTLE ROCK, July 2.—Judgment of the Howard circuit court, which awarded damages to J. M. Taylor, administrator of the estate of Ben L. Taylor, against the Arkansas Portland Cement Company, as the result of fatal injuries sustained by Taylor while an employee at the company's plant at Okay, was reversed by the Arkansas supreme court Monday. The suit was ordered dismissed by the higher court.

Taylor died January 10 of this year from the effects of internal injuries caused by a stack of cross-ties falling upon him. In reversing and dismissing the case the supreme court held that an instructed verdict should have been returned by the trial judge in favor of the defendant company.

Taylor and a companion were going about their usual tasks when a pile of cross-ties, overbalanced from the ground softening from excessive rain, toppled over, catching Taylor and injuring him so severely that he died. His companion was injured but only slightly.

Shortly after the death his father, as administrator, entered in Howard circuit court and recovered a judgment against the company. It was from this judgment the company appealed with the above result.

State Political Leader Is Dead

Paragould Man, Active In State Affairs, Dies
At Home Today.

PARAGOULD, Ark., July 2.—(AP)—Jefferson Davis Block, 67, Paragould attorney and long active in state politics, died at his home here early today following an attack of bronchial trouble. He was president of the National Bank of Commerce here and senior member of the law firm of Black and Kirsch, a partnership of 20 years' duration.

Block was educated in the schools of Cross county and in the University of Tennessee. He studied law in Jonesboro and was admitted to the practice in 1884. Shortly afterwards he was elected to the legislature and later served as prosecuting attorney of this district, and was a member of the constitutional convention in 1918.

Spanish Aviators Are Safe Ashore

Greeted By Tumultuous
Crowd When Landed
Early Today.

GIBRALTAR, July 2.—(AP)—Hearing a story of quiet heroism and patience in the face of death, Major Ramon Franco and his three companions in the ill-starred attempt at a trans-Atlantic flight, landed today at Gibraltar from the rescue boat, H. M. S. "Eagle," safe, sound and still able to laugh happily.

Along the streets and waterfront thousands had gathered to cheer the flyers who returned to safety after a week of floating on the bosom of the turbulent Atlantic in the region of the Azores.

Crowds such as the military-flavored Gibraltar has seldom known greeted the four, the British population of 10,000 or 15,000 turning out en masse while thousands of spectators came across from Spain to witness the return.

End of Record-Breaking Coast-to-Coast Flight

A round trip from coast to coast in 36 1-2 hours broke three records and an airplane for Captain Frank M. Hawks, left. The only mishap came at the very end of the epic flight, with the result pictured above. He dashed from New York to Los Angeles in 19 hours, 21 minutes—a record for the east-west flight. His return to Roosevelt Field, Long Island, took 17 hours, 39 minutes—bettering his own previous record. Naturally, the elapsed time for the round trip gave him another title. Swooping down to the eastern field for a night landing, Captain Hawks taxied too far, saw a wire fence and tried to hop it to avoid a collision. But he landed on the fence instead, with slight damage to the Lockheed-Vega ship. "It's just too bad," said the speed champion as he climbed out, grinning and uninjured.

Officers Deplore Dipping Trouble

Killings Not To Retard
Tick Eradication
Work.

LITTLE ROCK, July 2.—Deploing the circumstances surrounding the tick eradication work in the southwestern part of Arkansas which last week resulted in the killing of a state range rider in Miller county, Dr. W. A. McDonald, inspector in charge of the Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, said Monday that his organization has met with the worst opposition this year ever experienced in the history of the work in this state.

The fatal shooting last week of J. A. Simmons, alleged to have been done by L. K. Persons, is the second time in the history of tick eradication work in Arkansas that a range rider has been killed in the performance of his duty.

"The killing of Mr. Simmons is much to be regretted. This affair, however, will not affect the policies of the bureau nor the work that is under way," Dr. McDonald said.

Dr. McDonald also announced that there has never been any previous opposition to dipping in the vicinity of Garland City, in the vicinity of which the shooting occurred last week.

The prosecution of Persons is in the hands of Prosecuting Attorney Steve Carrigan of Hope while it is understood that Persons has retained the services of four of the leading attorneys of Texarkana for his defense.

Simmons was shot by Persons when the former, accompanied by other bureau and state employees, attempted to dip some of Persons' cattle about four miles from Garland City.

Dress Contest Winners In Tie

Judge of Event Is Unable To Decide Winner As Two Are Even.

The "afternoon dress" contest, under way here for some time past, closed Monday afternoon with Mrs. Ezra Simmons, of Clinton, and Mrs. Riley Lewallen, of Green Lassetter, in a tie for first place. Mrs. R. E. Johnson, of Columbus, placed second and Mrs. J. S. Wilson of Columbus third.

Miss Bess Hodges, clothing specialist from the University of Arkansas, was the judge, the contest being staged to encourage the use of the country's staple crop, cotton, in the making of clothing.

There were ten entrants in the contest, representing five communities in the county. Prizes were offered to winners by Reed-Routon and the Ladies Specialty Shop, and the four winning dresses are on display at Reed-Routon for a few days.

It is planned now that each of the contestants will be in attendance at Fayetteville Farmer's Week to enter the dress contest held annually in connection with the occasion.

Van Dyke Loses Feet In Accident

Ousted North Little Rock
Official Dragged
Under Train.

LITTLE ROCK, July 2.—C. N. Van Dyke, ousted city clerk of North Little Rock, now under indictment on embezzlement charges, was critically injured last night when he was caught beneath a Missouri Pacific freight train near Thirteenth and Maple streets, North Little Rock.

At the Missouri Pacific hospital, where Van Dyke was taken, it was said his left leg was severed about two inches above the ankle and that his right foot was mangled so badly that amputation was necessary. At the hospital it was said that although Van Dyke was suffering greatly from shock and loss of blood, he would recover.

Van Dyke told special agents for the Missouri Pacific soon after the accident that he was standing by the railroad tracks waiting for the train to pass as he was on route to his home at 1529 Sycamore street. He stepped off the track to permit the train to pass, he said, and was struck by something projecting from the side of a car. He was thrown under the train, and dragged for about 30 feet before his cries attracted the attention of the train crew. He directed members of the train crew in giving first aid before an ambulance arrived.

Van Dyke was removed from office last May after a $25,000 shortage in his accounts was charged. Later he was arrested in Birmingham, Ala., on the embezzlement charge, which had been preferred after his departure from Little Rock. He was returned by L. B. Branch, deputy sheriff, and after preliminary hearing was released on bonds totaling $5,000.

When Walter Corson of Chicago failed to show up for his wedding, friends found him under arrest for being drunk.

Bob Berry Misses Death By A Hair

Has Close Call When Is Attacked By Bull
Early Today.

Bob Berry, well known citizen of Hope, had a close call early today when he was attacked by a two-year-old bull and only the proximity of a fence perhaps enabled Mr. Berry to escape as lightly as he did. As it was, he suffered a nasty gash in his left leg, the animal's horns narrowly missing the femoral artery. It required several stitches to close the wound.

Medical attention was immediately secured and the wound dressed and while Mr. Berry is down town he is sore and stiff from his encounter with the bovine.

Rev. J. A. Quail of Snyford, Eng., invited the young people of his congregation to use the church as a courting place.

Chairman Sam Rofex said the Commission would possibly hand its decision late today.

Flagpole Sitter Is Going Strong

Says He Will Make 72
Hours On His Perch
Without Trouble.

Melven Warnack, flagpole sitter extraordinary, mounted to a lofty perch Monday afternoon at four o'clock, a flag pole on the roof of the Luther Hotel, and there expects to sit for 72 hours, stopping not in his sitting for wood, water nor coal but staying right on the job.

Warnack at first planned to use the roof of either the Saenger, First National or Bulman Furniture building, but when permission could not be secured used the roof of the Luther.

This is not Warnack's first experience in his arduous feat, he having been aloft numbers of times in cities of the east. His pet trick is standing on top of the pole on one foot for twelve hours, a stunt he expects to pull here Watermelon Festival day.

Warnack has set a time limit of 72 hours for his present stunt, expecting to climb down at four o'clock on the afternoon of Independence Day. Curious crowds give him the once-over every few minutes during the day and the telephone, which he carried with him, is almost constantly in use.

Rev. L. D. Compton delivered a sermon Saturday night, forceful and impressive and he, as well as Elder Thomason, deeply impressed their hearers. Elder Jim Reaves preached at the Sunday morning hour.

Dinner on the ground was served both days and a more enjoyable occasion has not been recorded in this section of Arkansas for many months.

The concluding business of the session was the selection of a meeting place for the next Association. New Hope Baptist church was chosen and Saturday before the fifth Sunday in September selected as the date.

First Load Home Grown Melons In Early Picking Runs Up To About 40 Pounds Each

In Weight.

The first load of home grown watermelons of the 1929 season went on the market here today when E. B. Benson, living north of town, came in with a truck load.

The melons were all smooth and almost of uniform size, averaging up around 35 to 40 pounds. Local merchants were glad to get the load.

Growers say the crop this year will exceed that of last year in quantity and they believe the larger ones will ripen earlier because of the splendid melon season.

Those Old-Fashioned Virtues of Loyalty and Honesty Stand The Test of Time

On June 8, 1890—and that seems a long time in this rapidly moving age—W. J. Green and Miss Lillie Smith were married at Rockdale, Texas. After a few years they came to Arkansas and for nearly a dozen years past have lived in this county. A pretty part of this happy history is that of the nine children born to Mr. and Mrs. Green all are living, all grown and all married save two.

The children are: V. J., Texarkana; Mrs. Sam Schooley, Jr., Mineral Springs; L. O., Oakland, Cal.; Mrs. W. T. Hughes, Leesville, La.; D. J., Hope; B. C., McNabb; G. G., McNabb; Mrs. Roy McMillan, Monroe, La.; Miss Helen, Hope.

Uses Brick In Friendly Fuss

Brick Yard Argument
Ends With Brick Being Brought In Play.

Moe Trotter and Neal McPherson, negroes, engaged in a little friendly argument down to the brick yard this morning. The argument reached a point, it is said, where actions rather than words would count so Moe picks him up a brick and smites Neal mightily upon the countenance.

The net result was Neal has a lacerated face and badly bruised proboscis—and Moe has a little flask coming up with the "co't." No fatalities and the argument remains unsettled.

Rough and Tumble Landing for Fliers

Effort To Break Record
Has Ending Entirely Unexpected.

METROPOLITAN, Air Port, Los Angeles, July 2.—(AP)—The attempt by Leo Nemis and Maurice Morrison to establish a new record for endurance refueling flying came to an unexpected end this morning when their motor stopped at an altitude of 5,000 feet and the tiny plane nosed down through a fog bank and crashed at the edge of the field.

Both men were cut and bruised about the face and head but after having their injuries dressed at the field first-aid station said they were going to try again as soon as their plane was repaired.

Batesville Woman Held As Suspect In Husband's Death

Body Found On Floor of Kitchen In Home At Cord.

BRUTAL MURDER

Man Had Been Shot and Skull Fractured With Blows From Gun.

BATESVILLE, Ark., July 2.—(AP)—Mrs. Norma Osborne, 21, was held here today under suspicion of being connected with the brutal murder of her husband, Morris Osborne, 24, late last night at the family home near here. Osborne was a merchant at Cord and a member of one of the county's prominent families.

Neighbors found Osborne, shot and beaten to death in the kitchen of the home, with his wife lying in a faint on the floor of the living room.

Osborne was the son of W. N. Osborne, a republican leader in Arkansas and associated with his son in the mercantile business at Cord.

Sheriff Sherill is making a search for a man wanted for questioning in connection with the killing.

Woman's Statement

Mrs. Osborne told the sheriff that her husband had been away from home all day on business, returned late. He had taken his gun with him and when he returned had laid the gun on the kitchen table, she said. She went to the garage with him to put up their car and when they returned to the house he stopped in the kitchen and picked up the gun while she went on into the living room.

Hears Shot Fired

She heard a few moments later she heard a shot fired and nothing more until neighbors came in. They found Osborne dead on the kitchen floor, three bullet wounds in him and his head crushed. He had been beaten over the head with the gun which was broken in three pieces. Sheriff Sherill took the woman in custody after questioning her.

The Osbornes had been married two and one-half years. They have no children.

Another Endurance Attempt Is Started

CULVER CITY, Cal., July 2.—(AP)—N. W. Mendell and R. E. Reinhardt took off here at 7:30 a. m. in an effort to beat the refueling endurance flight record held by the ship "Fort Worth."

The plane has 200 gallons of gas when it took off, sufficient to carry it through the day. The first refueling is planned just before nightfall.

President Hopes for Tax Reduction

No Downward Revision
Is To Be Expected Soon,
However.

WASHINGTON, July 2.—(AP)—President Hoover hopes today that the treasury surplus at the end of the fiscal year just closed will lead to a reduction of federal taxes but stated there were many facts to be determined before a definite program could be mapped out.

Before a reduction would be effective, the President said there would be need to study the effect of legislation within the past twelve months on the treasury, and other matters would be necessary be given attention.

Loyalty Night

THE Loyalty banquet in Hope tonight is one of those community affairs which are supposed to affect the city only. The "Trade at Home" slogan, it might be supposed, is designed purely for the benefit of city merchants—and yet Hempstead county and Southwest Arkansas have a material interest in seeing Hope succeed.

Show us any great mercantile city and we will show you behind that city some magnificent agricultural or industrial region that has made the city rich. Show us a rich agricultural section and somewhere in the vicinity we will find a trading post where the laws of exchange have made the country rich. City and country are forever bound together by trade, and whatever helps the city must ultimately help the country too.

The Loyalty banquet tonight deserves the support of every citizen of Hope, if for no other reason than because it is a voluntary movement. This city has long been known for civic enterprise, to which its men and women have given freely of time and money. How much of its success and goodwill in the trade territory Hope owes to this voluntary effort nobody knows; but the Loyalty banquet tonight is another step in the upbuilding of the city and section, and as such deserves the fullest support.

Former Governor Brough, who speaks tonight, is the best informed orator in the state. He has done more to arouse Arkansans to the realization of their own wealth and resources than probably any other man. Loyalty begins with honest pride and ends with earned success. Dr. Brough has contributed to the first, and it is up to Arkansas to prove the second.

Cutting Bus Speeds

THE Ohio Utilities Commission has done a wise thing in ordering all interurban bus companies to cut their maximum speed in the open country to 35 miles an hour.

To be sure, 35 miles an hour is not very high speed on a good road in the country. Yet, in many instances, fast-traveling busses have proven a menace to other drivers and a source of danger to their own passengers as well.

A bus is altogether too big and unwieldy an object to go hurtling along a road like a touring car. It must be governed by a different set of considerations. Other states might do well to copy the new Ohio regulation.

Fool-Proof Plane

THE Guggenheim fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics is going to spend $150,000 in an effort to find a "fool-proof" air plane—a plane that can be flown by the average man with no more risk or special training than are involved in the driving of an automobile.

If such a plane is ever developed, and marketed at a reasonable price, aviation would make all of its former progress look infinitesimal. The day of "erial flivvers," predicted by daring prophets for years, would actually be at hand. All of us would go flying.

That such a plane will arrive eventually is hardly to be doubted. The aviation experts are coming closer to it every month. The Guggenheim Fund's present search may be unsuccessful; but some day, surely, the fool-proof plane will be an everyday reality.

A Long Chance

ORDINARILY, no motorist would dream of driving his machine downtown if its license plates were missing. He would figure, and rightly so, that some policeman would stop him before he had gone half a dozen blocks.

But funny things happen, sometimes. Recently two Montana women set out on a motor tour. It happened that their auto had no license tags—yet they got all the way to Massachusetts before any officer noticed it and stopped them.

Traffic policemen are pretty sharp-eyed gentlemen, and little escapes them. Figure out, then, if you can, how these women got their car so many hundreds of miles without being stopped.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON—Mr. Herbert Hoover is entitled to sit back and contemplate the present state of American foreign relations with considerable satisfaction.

On the whole, the international situation seems to be a more pleasant sight than at any time since war crowds first began to appear over Europe.

We refer to the result of the coming conference between Hoover and Premier Ramsey MacDonald and the latest settlement of the reparations problem with its bearing on our foreign debts. Both these situations have shaped up in a manner unquestionably pleasing to Hoover.

MacDonald and Hoover between them are pretty certain to end definitely the naval armament race in which the United States and Britain have been engaged since the war. Whether or not they will be able to reduce the size of the two navies, both would like to, and there has been little but praise in this country for Hoover's public reduction proposals. The atmosphere of Anglo-American relations has been more or less clouded these last five years, but it now appears that the two new governments are going to get together on a peaceful working agreement. And that will be about as strong a guarantee of world peace as anyone could devise.

Europe Is Better Off

The value of the latest reparations agreement as a stabilizing factor seems already to be apparent in Europe. It must be a source of satisfaction to Hoover to observe that European statesmen are using more and more common sense in the milking of Germany. At the time of the Versailles peace conference Hoover and other American economists and financial experts on the spot agreed that Germany couldn't pay more than $450,000,000 a year and that her total reparations payments, based on capacity, ought to be around 20 or 22 billion dollars.

But in those days France was demanding reparations of 200 billions and Lloyd George was promising to hang the kaiser.

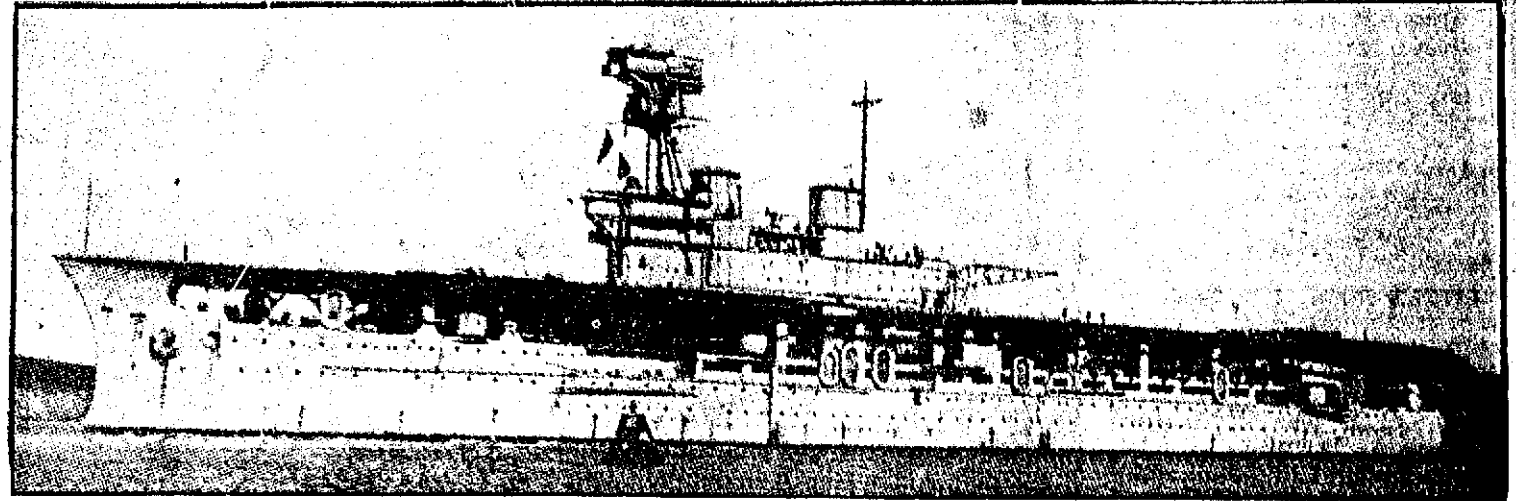

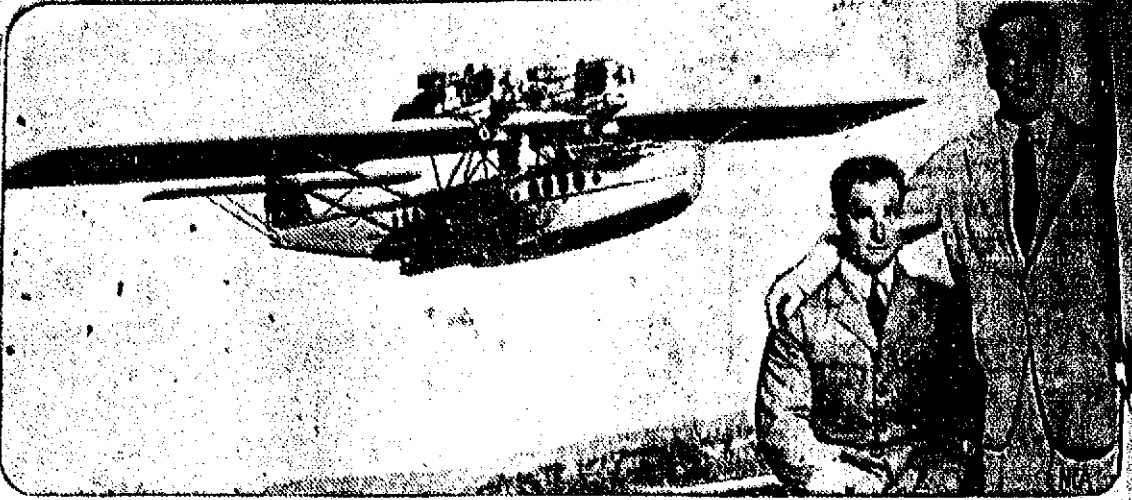

Now, ten years later, the Young plan calls for annuities averaging $492,000,000 for 37 years and then $408,000,000 until the 59th year, a general average very close to the original American estimate and well below the Dawes plan annuities of $620,000,000.

A glance over the rest of the map must also be pleasing to Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson. There are no serious Mexican, Nicaraguan and Chinese situations such as worried Coolidge and Kellogg a couple of years ago. Coolidge settled the Mexican trouble for an indefinite period by sending the tactful Dwight Morrow as ambassador to Mexico City. Nicaragua appears to have a strong popular government which is on excellent terms with Washington. China is having internal troubles, but they are causing us no serious concern.

One good way to get up in the world is by keeping on the level.

Sober Cowboys Enforce Prohibition Wit h "Soap Bullets" in Dance Hall!

GLACIER PARK, Mont., July 2.—Mike's Place in this tourist town is a sober rendezvous for western characters—a dance hall to be sure and in connection a soft drink soda water establishment that would be classed A-1 even by breath-smelling Hoover prohibition agents.
"They don't stand for reelin' cowboys carrying hip flasks either. A bouncer attends to all that. It's a sort of side-show attraction for summer tourists, seeking the thrill of seein' the night while bad men of the West, who only absolute observance of the 18th amendment makes docile.
"The other night a young he-flapper who had come out of the east with the longing to run amuck as a bad man himself, staggered into the modernized dance emporium stimulated for the occasion. He kissed a girl on the dance floor against her will.
The bouncer, a long lank fellow with chaps on, threw a lariat over the disturber and yanked him away from his grasp of the young lady while the dance was on. At the same time jerking an old 44 revolver from his holster the bouncer shot the young Easterner at lariat length. As his captive started to run out of the place with the nose, tightening about his neck, the cowboy fired three more shots which took effect, too.
"The man desperately taking the noose in preference to being shot again cried out, "For God's sake, don't shoot any more. I'm bleeding to death now."
"You see," explained "Mild

Mike" Shannon, proprietor of the place, "It was only the psychology of the situation that terrorized that intruder. The fellow was more scared than hurt, because we just extract the bullets from the shells we load into that old Colt and replace 'em with soap bullets. They sting, of course, and the funny thing about 'em is that when they hit a fellow the heated streams of soap produces the feelin' of bleeding profusely. We've had a lot of fun with our soap-shootin' affairs but we don't enact the tragic-comedy scene unless some fresh ale gets ungentlemanly with the ladies on the dance floor. It is a matter of business, you see. We get the best people of America's tourist travelers here in Glacier Park. They come from the big hotels at the gateway as curious onlookers to the picturesque nightly scenes of cowboys and girls displayin' their rhythm to the soft music of our orchestra. So we can't stand for any whoopee when a "liquor-cup-up staggers into our atmosphere of western refinement.
"So we worked out this burlesque on the erstwhile wild west. Our sheriff approves of it because it's effective and works fine on outside disturbers when they mistake the character of Mike's Place and come in expecting rough department will distinguish 'em to admirin' advantage among the ladies. I guess these tough Alaska dance hall scenes they show in the movies nowadays must have a bad inspirin' influence on some of the present-day youths who come in to the west thinkin' our stage is set for the same kind of rowdy stuff. Well, I'm an optimist, though, for the percentage has been small. Let me see, I can only recall two other occasions where we've had to stake out fatal-lookin' soap gun act to maintain the decorum of our dance hall and incidentally furnish some amusement for ourselves.
"The only thing about it is it's such a laugh-provoker that we've been besieged to put on the act as a frame-up on innocent persons. But we can't enact such a scene to please someone who wants to put such a joke on one of their party. You see it's too serious a matter in a way, until the fact comes known to the victim that we're only usin' soap for bullets. Consequently, we make it an unpremeditated affair and only resort to the old Colt as a matter of actual business.
"I was surprised, though, to see the shootin' the other night for I thought our methods so well known nobody would set themselves up as a soap target any

Stirring Drama of Love and Duty Coming In "The Foreign Legion"

The new Grand Theatre will present "The Foreign Legion," Universal's dramatic screen adaptation of "The Red Mirage," I. A. R. Wyllie's sensational novel, as its feature picture beginning July 4. This should be good news for local motion picture enthusiasts, as the picture is heralded as one of the finest ever produced.
The novel was a gripping story of love and duty, set against the chromatic background of the French Foreign Legion in Algeria. The picture is said to excel the book in the colorful presentation of the lives and adventures, the passions and the impulses of these iron soldiers and the steady discipline under which they live.
Norman Kerry and Lewis Stone are co-starred in the picture. Both are favorites and both are said to have exceptional roles in this picture. Opposite them are two popular women, Mary Nolan and June Marlowe, one the exotic, heart-breaker, the other the adorable sweetheart type. Miss Nolan is remembered as one of the most glorious of the famous Ziegfeld's Follies. When she left the Follies she went to Germany and started her screen career there. "The Foreign Legion" is one of her first roles since she returned to America.
The story concerns a British society man and Army officer who becomes infatuated with an unscrupulous woman, a blond of indescribable beauty. Her kisses spell disaster. His fate is to be cashiered from the army and to drop out of sight. He turns up in the French Foreign Legion, as a private under the command of his own father, who had similarly dropped out of sight before him. The dangerous blonde turns up in Algeria. With her is the hero's real sweetheart, her sister. How father and son, their identities unknown to one another, lock horns over the adventures, the unusual military results that ensue and the final working out of the romance, makes one of the most gripping life-dramas ever screened. Stone plays the father, Kerry the son. Mary Nolan is the adventuress and Miss Marlowe the younger girl.
Crauford Kent is also seen to advantage in a principal role. Edward Sloman directed the picture.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

John Curtis Morgan, lawyer, is married to his wife, Iris Morgan. She loves with Bert Crawford for whom Morgan has recently won acquittal, though Morgan does not suspect Crawford. Nan Carroll, Morgan's secretary, is deeply in love with him and by cleverly forcing him into his work, saves him from utter despair after Iris' departure.

For six months, she acts as long-distance housekeeper for him, winning the love of little six-year-old Curtis. Nan passes her bar examinations and Morgan takes her into the firm as junior partner. He tells her he is divorcing Iris and asks her to marry him. She accepts.

Their farcical marriage continues for three months, when Nan decides she will have to leave. The next morning Iris, deserted by Morgan in an effort to bring Morgan to his knees, Nan determines to fight and has the doctor remove Iris to a hospital.

Curtis is hostile to Nan at dinner. Morgan sends him to his room. He tells Nan he will have to do something for Iris and proposes a monthly allowance. Nan goes to tell Curtis good night. He asks her if it is true she won't let his mother come home. She tells him it is against the law for a man to have two wives.

Now Go On With the Story

CHAPTER XL

"Heaven knows," Nan Morgan reflected despairingly, "it would be hard enough to be a second wife under any circumstances, but to be called upon to explain and justify one's status to the seven-year-old child of the first wife."

But the boy's eyes were fixed upon her in an inexorable, unchild-like demand for an answer to his question. By simply answering "Yes," Nan knew she could win the first skirmish in the battle between herself and Iris for the loyalty of the child. For he was just and logical beyond his years. And the answer would be the simply truth.

Iris had known that she was giving John Curtis Morgan his freedom to marry again when she deserted him. But somehow she could not fight that way. In later years, Curtis could not truthfully say that his stepmother had destroyed his ideal of his mother. It was a cruel, cruel, cruel thing. If he were to be destroyed, Iris herself must be the destroyer.

And so, Nan answered: "I don't think your mother thought about the law when she went away, darling. But you see, your father did. And she was ever comin' back. Her voice choked on a sob. That was true, if he had had the faintest hope, he would never have married again. And so he married me, Curtis, because he thought you both needed me."

Curtis nodded forlornly. "I told him so," he admitted slowly. "And I was awful glad when you came to live with us. But now my real mother's come back..." He was obviously wrestling with the problem. Nan's heart ached with pity as she watched him. Finally he drew a deep, quivering breath, then blurted out: "Mother said I'd have to choose between you and her, Nan. Did she mean you'd go and she'd come back, if I—if I said so?"

Nan's impulse—the quick demand of her pride—was to stake everything then and there on the boy's followed immediately upon Iris Morgan's return. Her husband was a stricken man, though he tried with obvious and heartbreaking conscientiousness, to present a normally cheerful face to his family and to his downtown world. He was pathetically grateful for Nan's quiet acceptance of his moodiness, and she believed, for her unmistakably firm "Good night" in the drawing-room each evening. Sometimes, when she was thus making it clear that she did not expect him to play the lover or husband while his heart was a battleground, his eyes met hers with wistful questioning, as if they were mutely asking: "Do you really understand and forgive me, Nan? Do you see how it is with me? Don't you know that I love you, too, but that I can't come to you just yet?"

And her own round, childish but wise eyes told him: "I do understand. Don't you worry your dear head about me now. But love me as much as you can."

Two days after Iris' return John Curtis Morgan presented his legal wife with a smart little coupe, explaining awkwardly: "A prosperous firm like ours ought to be able to afford two cars, don't you think? I want you to feel free to come and go as you please, without bothering about how I'm going to get around."

As she thanked him, Nan's heart contracted sharply. Was the car a clumsy attempt at peace-making? Surely he did not think he had to bribe her to be patient and cheerful! Then she dismissed the suspicion as unworthy of both them. The car would be a great convenience. It would permit her to stay at home later in the mornings, so that she could put a greater emphasis upon her housekeeping and home-making. Another weapon against Iris, who had not cared enough to turn the house into a home. Of course, she would miss those companionable trips downtown together, Nan reflected ruefully, but these last two days they had been a strain upon both of them. Was that, possibly, the reason he had contrived to make them unnecessary?

For four days father and son made afternoon trips to the hospital to see the woman who had deserted them and who had now flung herself upon their mercy. After that first day, those trips were not mentioned. Not even Curtis referred to them, but each evening he had no appetite for his dinner, and Nan realized, helplessly, that Iris was stuffing him with unwholesome sweets. And she could not forbid him to accept. She could imagine the boy's quick retort: "I guess my own mother knows what's good for me!" No; her hands were tied.

The fourth day after Iris' return was Christmas Eve. Nan had bought an elaborate carpentering outfit for Curtis, as well as all the materials he could need in constructing a toy airplane. His father had consulted her anxiously as to the advisability of giving the boy a bicycle. Knowing Curtis' passionate desire for the wheel, Nan had encouraged its purchase, with the assurance that he would obey her injunctions to ride only on sidewalks. But the bicycle had not been bought. On Christmas Eve Morgan confessed hesitatingly: "His mother was afraid of an accident. She—thought perhaps a toy automobile would be more safe. It's quite big. Operates with pedals you know. I hope he'll like it."

Nan flushed hotly as she applauded the choice with apparent cheerfulness. Of course Iris had put her in the wrong, had made John feel that his son's very life was in danger, so long as Nan had control of him.

Decorating the Christmas tree was a rather ghastly ordeal, for the ghost of the living mother who should have been there hovered over the girl and the man during the whole ceremony.

"No fair peeping or shaking the box," Morgan warned Nan, with a forced jocularity that made her throat ache with tears, as he tied her present to a branch of the tree. "I wonder if he's giving Iris a Christmas present," she could not help asking herself. "Of course he helped Curtis choose something for her, and I'm glad he did. But oh, I'll be relieved when Christmas is over!"

But when Christmas Day actually dawned, all her own private heartache was swallowed up in a

Trial Soon To Unravel Tangle Of "Wood Case"

Ralph A. Wood (lower left), backed by Cecil W. Holt (lower right), accuses his wife, Mrs. Grace M. Wood, with assault with intent to kill him. Mrs. Wood denies the charges and alleges that Wood and Holt robbed a bank.

DETROIT, July 2.—(AP)—All the tangled phases of what has come to be known in Detroit as "the Wood case," will be re-told in circuit court here when Mrs. Grace M. Wood faces trial on a charge of assault with intent to kill her husband, Ralph A. Wood, well known builder and contractor.

With Mrs. Wood will be William Thompson and Taylor Pierce, whom she is accused of having hired to slay Wood that she might collect $50,000 insurance before he could divorce her. Although no date has been set, it is expected the case will be called during the July term.

The principal witness for the prosecution will be Cecil W. Holt, an accountant. His story that Mrs. Wood engaged him and three others to kill Wood was the first of a series of charges and counter-charges that surrounded the case with so many involved offshoots that by common consent it became known as "the Wood case" in the interest of brevity.

The prolog to the drama was enacted in Wyandotte, a Detroit suburb, the night of January 9, last. Eighteen law enforcement officers, acting upon information supplied by Holt, gathered about Wood's real estate office to await arrival of the alleged plotters. Holt had said he took part in the conspiracy to obtain evidence against Mrs. Wood.

Holt, Thompson Pierce and Ambrose L. Hagerty drove to the office. Hagerty and Holt went to the door while Thompson and Pierce remained in the car. Holt said the plan was to black-jack Wood, "take him for a ride," and kill him.

Wood had arranged with officers to submit to the black-jacking and had padded the inside of his hat to prevent injury. The alleged plotters were to be arrested after they had carried Wood to their waiting automobile.

When Wood came out of his office, however, he immediately opened fire on Hagerty, who was killed instantly. Thompson and Pierce escaped amid a fusillade of bullets from the officers' weapons, but were arrested in their homes the same night. Mrs. Wood was found at home in bed and arrested.

Mrs. Wood denied any intention against her husband's life and declared the visit to the real estate office involved only an attempt to obtain papers from Wood's office safe. These papers, she said her husband had last formed her, would "ruin her."

Mrs. Wood spent four days in jail before obtaining her release on bond and soon afterward she brought about the arrest of her husband and Holt on charges of robbing a bank at Sturgis, Mich. The two men were taken to Sturgis and held there for some time to be released just before arraignment. They presented perfect alibis showing they were in Detroit at the time of the hold-up.

A grand jury investigation into the death of Hagerty was held to determine whether a crime was committed when he was slain. The results of the inquiry have not been announced.

Catching As An Art Is Gone; Ancients Were Far Better

"King" Kelly led the great catchers and Ray Schalk ended the dynasty. Between them were the famous backbones of all times.

NEW YORK, July 2.—The minstrel sing of the olden days when a catcher was an important personage, ranking with and even ahead of the pitcher.

Catchers were mighty men, the ancient lay has it, but gone are the backstops whose fame once rang from Coogan's Bluff to muddy Mississippi. The lively ball which emphasized the "bat" in battery hung the onus on the pitcher and relegated the man behind the plate into something as necessary, but no more breath-taking than the little whisk broom of the umpire.

King Kelly was the first of the great ones, the widely-mustached Boston pride who reveled in the title of the "Ten Thousand Dollar Beauty" in the days beyond 1890 when $10,000 was money at which to bare the head. Michael was so heroic that he almost dwarfs the fame of Charlie Ewing and of the later Johnny Kling. Records were rare when King Kelley flourished and one can say truly that one was greater than the other. All were great.

There was Chief Zimmer who had only to waddle behind the plate at Cleveland for strong men to blanch and wish the game were over. Cuppy and Zimmer, Young and Zimmer; these were poison. The epochal Cy went to Boston later and most of his best days were passed there with the no less well known Lou Criger pulling them in back of the base.

This Boston boasted proudly of Charlie Ganzel, who lifted Kid Nichols and John Clarkson to

July 4 Fight Is Changed To Rink

Abandon Plan for Open Air Bout Because Unable To Get Ready.

The boxing contest to be held here July 4, instead of being at the open air arena at Fair park as announced will be held in the usual place, the promoters announce today.

This change in plans was necessitated by their being unable, in the limited time at hand, to have a canvas top for the arena built. Nor were they able to have lights wired into the arena for use in night exhibitions at the park but these matters will be looked after before another exhibition is staged.

Advance sale of seats for the Independence Day card has caused prediction to be made it will be the most largely attended of any recent card and with Selmar and Steele going on in the finals, following what is believed will be a red-hot scrap between Hall and Terry, it appears that fight fans will have plenty good time this July 4.

Death is Answer to Endurance Flight

They had christened their plane "The Answer," had Viola Gentry and Jack Ashcraft, two New York flyers, because they planned to keep it in the air longer than the famous "Question Mark" or the Kelly and Robbins planes had flown. But, as this photo shows, the name took on a grim significance in connection with their hopes, for it crashed near Roosevelt Field and killed Ashcraft, upper left, and seriously in the air on their endurance flight attempt, the pair injured his girl companion, upper left. After a night were swinging back to the field when the craft went into a tailspin and hurtled 2000 feet straight down through the fog.

The Higher Patriotism

Fourth of July Sermon Delivered At the First Methodist Church Last Sunday Morning By the Pastor, Dr. Francis A. Buddin.

taolon eom Athinside Must—h Inside Must—The Higher. As we approach another Independence Day, in which we celebrate the birth of this nation, we are led to look in retrospect upon the unfolding of its glorious history. One hundred and fifty three years ago the Declaration of Independence was signed, declared this an independent nation. As we study the lives of these men who were conspicuous in events of our nation's beginning, and as we read their utterances, we can not but be impressed with one fact about all others: that the fear of God actuated those men in every step that they took. Those who have occupied positions of leadership in every crucial moment of our nation's history, and have stamped the impress of their lives and characters upon the life of the nation have been men who recognized God as the great, invincible Power upon whom they were dependent. Almost every sentence in the utterances of Washington bears testimony to his recognition of the need of the blessings and guidance of a beneficent Providence. Lincoln's religious views might not conform to our ideas of orthodoxy, but that Lincoln recognized his utter dependence upon God, none can doubt, and he often resorted to prayer for guidance. Woodrow Wilson, at the most crucial moment during the World War issued his proclamation calling the entire nation to prayer. In a very peculiar sense, the history of our nation has verified the declaration of the Psalmist, "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."

The history of our people presents many illustrious examples of deeds of valor in war. When the country has called, her sons have always answered, and multiplied thousands have laid themselves upon her altar in the various emergencies through which we have come. We have been disposed to glorify war, and count all others of little importance in comparison with those who have exhibited that type of patriotism that is vividly expressed in war. We would be the most unworthy ingrates should we cease to ascribe to our fathers the honor that is their due for the sacrifices that they have made, and the price that they have paid in the shedding of their blood for the inheritance that is ours, but may we not hope and believe that civilization has at last passed beyond the war stage? Hope and faith is not enough. We must join with these our prayers and our earnest efforts to make peace secure in all the earth.

It is a high patriotism that makes a man willing to die for his country, but it is a higher patriotism that urges him to guard with scrupulous care the character and integrity of his nation against the enemies within whose God is the Lord. Much has been done to conquer ignorance and disease for which we are thankful. Science and invention have placed at our disposal conveniences and comforts that a generation ago were not dreaming of as possible, but much remains to be done that calls for the higher patriotism.

Lawlessness is abroad in the earth, and there is an increasing number of those who deny by their very lives and action that God is the Lord, and throw defiance in the face of the reign of righteousness. Life is too cheap, and every conceivable sort of crime is shamefully rampant.

The most subtle foe against which we have to fight today is the liquor traffic. They tell us, and we know, that the enemies of prohibition are now putting on their most carefully planned, and thoroughly organized campaign since 1918. There are three lines of attack: First the old gag that it interferes with personal liberty. Second, slanderous attacks upon the Anti-Saloon League, and efforts to ridicule the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, that organization of faithful women, true patriots, that shines with untarnished honor through the years. Third, insistence upon the failure of prohibition. All will concede that it has not been as successful as we might desire, but one has to have his eyes but half open to see that conditions are much better than they were, and infinitely better than they would have been if we had the legalized liquor traffic in this day of speed and powerful machines. The curse of the illicit liquor traffic is raging everywhere. The bootleg gang, hiding around in the woods and swamps, and elsewhere, trying to evade the law, and preying upon the weaknesses of men, manufacturing and selling the infernal stuff that destroys man-

Many Buildings To Be Used for Farmer's Week

Fayetteville, Ark., July 2, Views of some of the buildings that will be used in the various programs of Farmers' Week, which is to be held here by the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, August 6, 7, 8, 9.

1 and 2—The Agricultural building and Gray Hall where a portion of the men's and boy's sectional meetings will be held. 3—Entrance to the Agricultural building; 4 and 5—The livestock barns on the main Experiment Station farm where farmers will study the various investigations pertaining to dairying, beef cattle, hogs, and sheep; 6—The woman's section programs on homemaking, child care, food clothing, and farm crafts will be held in the Home Economics building of the College of Agriculture; 7—The Dairy building, another that will be utilized for sectional programs; 8—A general view of the 523-acre Main Experiment Station farm, where Farmers' Week visitors will go each morning for the purpose of studying the hundreds of investigations that are being carried on in the interest of the state. This farm is a part of the more than 1000 acres of Arkansas Experiment Stations farms where farm problems are being solved by workers of the College of Agriculture.

hood, saps the moral fibre out of character, breaks up homes and crucifies happiness, constitute the greatest peril to our nation's integrity and permanence. They are as low as the demons of hell, and those who buy it and drink it are no better. And just as grave a menace to our nation and our government are those who are making "home brew" or "polite booze," more of a menace than the reddest bolshevik out of Russia, or the falsest traitor that ever walked the soil of this fair land. The malt syrup business is a curse of this day. The drink evil in any form is the fountain head of every imaginable crime. It breaks down moral standards and ideals; it lights the incendiary torch, it whets the assassin's knife, it cocks the highwayman's pistol. The hour has struck. The president of these United States has issued a call for recruits for the ranks of decency, and it is time for every honest man and woman who loves their country, and who believes in the reign of righteousness to take their stand uncompromisingly against all lawlessness, and to fight this insidious foe, the liquor traffic, until it is wiped off the face of the earth. The higher patriotism will demand of all of us that we give ourselves unsparingly to the task of conquering every foe within, and establishing this land of ours as "The nation whose God is the Lord."

In the Field with the County Agents

Farmers' Week is just a month off! Last year 65 people attended from this county. Can't we bring that number to over a 100 this year? Everyone needs a vacation and rest sometime during the year, and since this event comes at a time during the year when there is less work than common to be done, just make your plans to go to Fayetteville August 6, 7, 8, and 9. To date we have a $10,000 rate for the round trip over the Frisco Railroad and some have indicated that they will haul folks as cheap as $400 for the round trip in trucks and touring cars. This offers an opportunity to spend an inexpensive vacation; yet one worth many times its cost. The trip into the Ozarks alone is worth $10.00, but think of the royal entertainment while you are there at the State University.

Men and boys who are planning to make the trip on their own expense, or who are planning to ask their club to send them should send their names into Lynn Smith, Hope, Ark., at once since reservations must be made as early as possible.

The corn crop in most of Hempstead county is poorer than at this time last year while cotton is better. The especially dry weather which has prevailed the last few weeks has allowed everyone to clean out the grass from their crops, but if moisture is not supplied soon truck crops an early corn will be severely damaged. Tomatoes and cantaloupes are suffering worst just now. The last rain which fell was decidedly local with the result that some sections of the county are needing rain worse than others. This weather is very unfavorable for boll weevil development, and may result in less serious injury than was at first anticipated by the early infestation. Since cotton makes a better crop with only light showers the cotton crop as a whole is favorable.

Live Stock

A very essential part of the care of livestock in the summer is shade and plenty of fresh water at all times. This is especially true with hogs. A hog kept in a poorly shaded lot with water only twice a day, and then not clean fresh water, will not gain as he should no matter how much feed he gets. Let's watch out for the water and shade this hot weather.

Weather such as we have been having recently is the type which dries up pastures and causes the cow to drop off in milk production. It is to furnish green succulent feed in such times as will prevail soon, if the drought continues, that we need the one-fourth acre per cow of Sudan grass. Cows

Jail Mother of 16

Because she needed money to provide an education for her children, she sold whiskey. So Mrs. Katherine Post, above, 56, and mother of 16 children, explained to a Fort Smith, Ark., judge when she pleaded guilty to selling two quarts of home-made whiskey. She was sentenced to serve 18 months. She lives at Altus, Ark.

SNAPPY STUFF

Three Chicago women found George Ryan robbing their home and marched him to the police station.

Although a Chicago judge admitted that Mrs. Ada Gorham was married to a "brute," he refused to grant her a divorce.

Charlie Curtis at least has a found the answer to one question—he knows how a vice president can get a little publicity.

Maine Senator Makes Wine

Even in Maine, a state that has been dry for 75 years, there are people who like their wine. And Arthur M. Gould, Jr., above, United States senator, is one of them. A St. Louis grape juice company, as an exhibit in a law suit, offered a letter from Gould in which he admitted having obtained "some very fair results" with their product in making wine. "A license for light wines and beers would be a great improvement over the present prohibition law," Senator Gould says.
